

Going to Creation Station at the Main Library

On some days, the library has an activity called Creation Station. It is a time when I can make something in the Activity Room. When I go to Creation Station, I can check to see if I need to pick up my supplies at the long white counter. A grown-up can help me decide what materials I need and how much. There may also be supplies, like crayons, at each table.

Sometimes Creation Station can be crowded and noisy while other children are making their craft. If there are no open seats, I might need to wait for someone to finish their work before I sit down. If I am not sure how to use some of the materials, I can ask a grown-up. When I am finished creating my craft, I can help by cleaning up my space and taking work with me.
