NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Nashville Public Library patrons can now gain complimentary admission to Madame Tussauds Nashville, as the library and museum today launched a new addition to NPL's Community Passports collection.

The addition means library customers can now get free admission to four local arts and culture attractions: Madame Tussauds Wax Museum, Cheekwood Estate & Gardens, the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum and the National Museum of African American Music. The program also offers free electric bike rentals with the NPL BCycle Pass.

“We’re excited by this partnership, and more importantly, for the opportunity it offers to our library patrons,” said Terri Luke, interim director of NPL. “Madame Tussauds is world-renowned for their true-to-life celebrity wax figures, and the Nashville location’s focus on Music City history and culture is a great attraction that we’re proud to help our patrons experience for themselves.”

The Madame Tussauds Community Passport is available at NPL now through the end of 2023.

“Built to honor Music City and its deep roots into America’s history, Madame Tussauds Nashville hosts visitors from across the globe as they enjoy a historical walk through America’s musical past and present with vivid scenes supporting the colorful cast of figures,” said Monica Jackson, marketing manager for Madame Tussauds Nashville. “We are delighted to partner with Nashville Public Library on their Community Passport program. This program is a great opportunity to expose children and families to the history behind the music.”
